Brought to you by Bayyinah Institute

Ustadh Obaidallah & Ustadha Khadeejah

Sanford 213

For people of faith, it's often hard to balance the life they live, with all its priorities, goals, responsibilities, and distractions, with their desire to build a meaningful relationship with their Creator and their preparation for the afterlife. Many times, a polarization can exist between the immediate concerns of life and more long-term desires for spiritual connection and fulfillment. Is there a way to eliminate the dichotomy? Whether you're a believer or not, come learn more about the unique challenges that come from a faith-based worldview and the guidance that Islam provides in how Muslims can navigate these challenges

Inner Struggles Outer Strength
Brought to you by RCM
Imam Arshad Anwar & Zubair Zafar
Sanford 213

Without a doubt, it is our inner struggles that eventually manifest into greatness. We are all tested in unique ways and we all must strive to overcome our conflicts. Paulo Coelho once wrote, "...I've always had faith in life, even when I thought 'God forgot me.'" It is our responsibility to look deep into ourselves, channel our inner struggles, and turn them into strengths to better our world and society. Everyday is a sign that God is not yet discouraged of us.
